CoR - THE BASICS

With amendments to the Chain of Responsibility (CoR) introduced on 1 October 2018, many are left wondering what CoR actually means and to whom does this apply. Put simply, CoR is a legal obligation that holds all workers in the transport supply chain responsible (and liable) for ensuring breaches of the Heavy Vehicle National Law (HVNL) do not occur.

According to the National Heavy Vehicle Regulator, if you are in a position that influences the transport supply chain, then you have responsibility under CoR, which then holds you legally liable. The focus of CoR is to instil a safe working environment for everyone by bolstering the safety practices and procedures throughout the transport supply chain.

The current CoR sees primary duty of care applied to each party in the supply chain of a transport vehicle, which means everyone at every step of the transport supply chain has an obligation to minimise or eliminate potential risks or harm by taking reasonable measures to ensure safety.

Whether you're a packer, driver, contractor or business manager, so long as you're a link in the transport supply chain, then the laws are applicable to you.

These relevant work roles include, but are not limited to rostering and scheduling, vehicle operation as well as loading and packing. If you have any influence or control over on- and off-road operations, you can be held legally accountable to the HVNL.

You can have a look at the HVNL checklist to ascertain whether this applies to your current role in transport.
